COVERING THE CAMPUS LIKE A SWARM OF GNATS

GSU recognized as one of safest schools in U.S.

By Rachel Cason
Staff writer

Georgia Southern recently was named one of the top 25 safest schools as chosen by The Daily Beast. The Web site compared over 4,000 colleges and found GSU to be the 18th safest.

Director of Public Safety Mike Russell said, "[The rating system] is new to us. We found it on campus safety ListServ and found out we were on the list."

Russell explained that the site recently compiled the 25 schools in the country with the largest crime problems and decided to follow up with this list.

GSU President Bruce Grube said, "These rankings were based on a survey of nearly 4,000 colleges and universities across the United States. Some of the other institutions that were ranked in the top 25 include Texas A&M, Brigham Young University, University of Mississippi, University of Virginia, Georgia College & State University and the University of Montana."

This accomplishment, though, does not mean that big changes are on their way to GSU.

Russell said that news of being in the top 25 safest schools "does not mean we will now just sit back and rest on our laurels." Rather, he said, "This won't change what we're doing. [This ranking] confirms that we are doing the right things, and we will continue doing what we have been."

"It reaffirms what we have always thought and felt," Russell continued. "We don't have zero crime, but we are doing well."

Grube said, "The safety of our campus will always be a top priority for the university. We are continually working to maintain and improve the many security measures that we have on campus, and we are always exploring new avenues in public safety and awareness."

Students can also help improve GSU's standing. Russell said that the best way for the campus to remain safe and become safer is by doing the things we have been told to do since we were children. "Lock things, don't leave cars or dorms unlocked," he said. "Never walk alone at night. Traveling groups."

Being one of the safest schools in the country is the result of team effort.

Grube said, "This ranking affirms that the university's Office of Public Safety does an excellent job in maintaining a secure campus for everyone who lives, works and studies here. We have an outstanding group of law enforcement professionals who take their responsibility to the university and its students very seriously."

Russell credits both his staff and the student body.

He said, "We want to promote students being good neighbors and have students look out for each other."

The best way to do that, according to Russell, is by creating a GSU community. "Staff and students are taking ownership of our community," he said.

According to Russell, student witnesses have helped the public safety department stop some recent potential car break-ins.

"There was a student who saw something going on, and rather than just turning the other way, [he] called us. We were able to investigate and find the person responsible."

Grube said, "The safety of a campus is something that is very important to parents and students. This ranking affirms for parents that Georgia Southern University is one of the safest campuses in the country."

'From Backpack to Briefcase' informs students of employment

By Laura Kelly

Guest writer

Georgia Southern's Career Services will be hosting a "From Backpack to Briefcase" workshop this Thursday for students and alumni interested in internships or full-time jobs. The event will teach students methods and techniques on how to search for and obtain successful careers.

"From Backpack to Briefcase" is for students who are curious about and want to learn more about the job search process. New technologies, skills, information and resources used for job seeking will be explained to students and alumni who attend the workshop.

"This is not limited to just seniors about to graduate but also for students who want to find internship or co-op positions," said Heather Scarboro, recruitment coordinator for the Office of Career Services.

"We will give steps and resources to students to make the job search process a little easier and less scary," said Scarboro.

Senior Casey Browne said, "I'm graduating in May so I am definitely going to the workshop. I could use a little help with getting a job lined up. I have no clue where to start.

Career Services aims to provide students with the knowledge and skills necessary in career searching and development. The workshop is intended to aid students in utilizing these skills in order to find a successful career.

Dorsey Baldwin, assistant director for employment at the Office of Career Services, said, "Career Services has been conducting workshops all semester on various topics from resume writing, interviewing skills, utilizing technology in your job search, transitioning from a college student to a professional, how to work a career fair and networking.

The workshop shows students how to use resources such as Eagle Career Net, which is the online job and recruitment system for GSU. The workshop also provides students with alternate resources they can use for job searching and the necessary steps needed to take for a successful job search.

Students will be introduced to new techniques for job seeking and will learn how to effectively select a stable and secure job.

A previous "From Backpack to Briefcase" workshop was held several weeks ago with a successful outcome.

The upcoming event descriptions can be found at Eagle Career Net on the Career Services web site along with information about other upcoming workshops.

The workshops will be presented at the Williams Center in the Career Resource Center, room 1047, on Thursday, Oct. 15 from 12-1p.m. by Stephanie Saunders, career advisor, and later from 5-6p.m. by Scarboro.

"All of the workshops are open to all students and seek to prepare them for being successful job seekers," said Scarboro.

Sentimental scholarship supports GSU Center for Irish Studies

By Kelsey Sorrell

Staff writer

The Eddie Ivie Memorial Scholarship, for the Center for Irish Studies, was presented to the dean of the College of Liberal Arts and Social Sciences on Tuesday night during the Irish Variety Concert.

The scholarship provided $3,500 for the Eddie Ivie Scholarship account, which benefits students who want to study abroad in Ireland.

CLASS Dean Michael Smith stood in for Howard Keeley, the director for the Center for Irish Studies, to receive the scholarship.

"We knew we would be getting this scholarship, as this is the fourth annual year that the concert was held, and that was the concert's purpose," Smith said. "This scholarship is presented to Irish studies and the college every year."

The scholarship was given by The Emerald Eddie Society, which was established in 2006 by Vic and Cheryl Powder in memory of their son, Eddie Ivie.

According to the society, Eddie loved the songs and stories from Ireland and had been a musician, songwriter and stage performer before his death in 2005.

The Powders' mission is to host events to contribute to charitable organizations, mainly those that involve Eddie's passion for Ireland and those that promote the ideals by which he lived throughout his life.

The society gives 100 percent of the profits made from all of the events to the Georgia Southern University Foundation, which provides the Center for Irish Studies with the scholarship.

One of the main annual events to raise the money for these organizations is the Irish Variety Concert.

Joseph Pellegrino, assistant professor in the literature and philosophy department, has been involved with the Irish Studies program since he came to GSU.

"Every year we have this fundraiser in order to raise a significant amount of money for the scholarship to help the students study abroad in Ireland," he said. "There will be at least two more in the Atlanta area this year as well."

This year, the concert was held at the Emma Kelly Theater in downtown Statesboro. Tickets were $10 through the Center for Irish Studies or through the theater, and anyone with a ticket was able to attend.

All of the concert's proceeds were given to the Eddie Ivie Scholarship and will soon be awarded to those studying in Ireland next summer.

The concert was hosted by Harry O'Donoghue and featured multiple entertainers throughout the night such as Frank Emerson and Johnnie Kennedy, along with the Irish Dancers of Savannah and Georgia Southern Music Majors.

October: Who knew?

Joey Newton

is a graduate student in Spanish education from Americus, Ga. He is a staff columnist for the George-Anne.

Did you know that October is quite a popular month? It's true. Apparently, many different organizations and causes decided to nominate ole number 10 in the lineup to be the host month for their cause. I thought some were interesting, and I thought you may like to know what to be "aware" of, what to "celebrate," and what to "appreciate" in this month of October. I can't comment much on all of them since there are, in fact, so many of them, but I will try. Here we go...

Breast Cancer Awareness Month: Breast Cancer has affected me, so I am an advocate of "Saving the Ta-Ta's." You can make jokes if you want, but it is a legit company that fights for the cause.

Clergy Appreciation Month: Thank your preacher, priest, imam, rabbi, and roshi for all they do.

Filipino-American History Month: Black History is February, Filipino History in October. Easy enough.

Domestic Violence Awareness Month: Stop the violence.

Lesbian Gay Bisexual Transgender History Month: National Coming Out Day was Oct. 11, but if you missed it, anytime in October probably works.

National Cyber Security Awareness Month:

Time to change your PINs and passwords and sign up for Lifelock. An identity is a terrible thing to waste.

Sudden Infant Death Syndrome Awareness Month: Learn more about SIDS to protect your kids, future kids and those you babysit.

National Dental Hygiene Month: What's that smell? Oh yea, it's your breath! Brush your teeth this month, Captain Halitosis.

Polish-American Heritage Month: Sauerkraut, kielbasa sausage, potatoes and deliciousness. If these are common in your kitchen, thank your parents. You may just be Polish.

World Blindness Awareness Month: Unfortunately, The George-Anne is not printed in Braille, but it'd be really sweet if it were, especially this month.

American Pharmacist Month: Somebody's gotta sell the drugs, so let's honor them. Legally.

German-American Heritage Month: Sept. 15-Oct. 15. Oktoberfest. Enough said.

National Hispanic Heritage Month (Sept. 15-Oct. 15) Si puedes leer ese parte, dar gracias a alguien que enseña español. Octubre es el mes de patrimonio español.

Italian-American Heritage Month: I think I have some Italian in me, since I really like pizza, pasta and pepperoni, so I plan to cook a little more than usual of that this month to honor the cause.

So there you have it. Mark your calendar this month to observe your favorite of the above observances. This is just a sampling of the many things worth celebrating in October. So whether or not you celebrate all of them or hate every single one, I wish you a very Happy Holiday!

Time to pull the plug on Afghanistan is a senior political science major from Woodstock, Ga. He is a guest columnist for the George-Anne.

In the past few months, there has been a violent increase in Taliban attacks in Afghanistan on civilians, NATO troops and American installations in Afghanistan. The local Taliban tribes have been gaining traction as a resistance insurgency and now control more than 80 percent of the country.

Commander of US Forces in Afghanistan Gen. Stanley McChrystal has told President Obama that without an immediate infusion of over 40,000 new combat troops, the war is lost. This should come as no surprise. The United States is not the world's foremost superpower anymore; we can't just waltz into any country, flawlessly execute our plans and impose our political ideals on an unsuspecting and vastly different culture than our own.

Just as the Taliban's ancestors in Afghanistan defeated the invasions of Alexander the Great, Genghis Khan, Great Britain and the Soviet Union, it appears that they are about to defeat the United States as well.

This should not come as a surprise to anyone, nor should it be taken as an anti-American statement. It's simply reality.

There is one simple underlying fact present in this issue. Afghanistan is an unwinnable war. Its unforgiving mountainous terrain is nearly insurmountable by a large, land army. The climate fluctuates from sub-zero temperatures to more than 120 degrees in a matter of days. The local Taliban fighters live there and have lived there for thousands of years; they're entrenched, they have public, private and tribal support and they aren't leaving anytime soon.

The continued presence of a foreign occupying army serves as a recruitment tool for the Taliban militias. The economy sustains itself on heroin exports for which global demand rarely decreases. The government is completely corrupt.

The president of Afghanistan, Hamid Karzai, by all reasonable accounts from any media analysis, stole the last election just last month. How would we even define "victory" in Afghanistan?

There will always be armed extremists with violent, fundamentalist ideologies. The United States, nor any other country, will ever change that reality.

We need to pull the U.S. Army out of Afghanistan. We need to bring the Marines home. We need to stop breaking the bank fighting an obdurate quagmire, especially when this country has a $12 trillion debt and is running a trillion dollar deficit every year. We simply cannot afford to fight this war of choice.

According to costofwar.com, the war in Afghanistan has already cost us, the taxpayers, 228 billion and counting. A common argument is that if we pull out of Afghanistan, "Al-Qaeda" will re-establish a base there. They already have an established base in Pakistan, and they can establish a base virtually anywhere in the Middle East. Why are we not fighting them in Pakistan, Yemen and Oman? We need to increase our domestic security spending and increase the amount of Special Forces units that can covertly dismantle terrorist organizations all over the world.

However, there is very little money to be made by defense contractors when it comes to Special Forces operations; they make their money on large, clumsy armies that require expensive land and air vehicles that are produced and sold by domestic industries that profit immensely from an ongoing war. Wars should be fought despite their costs, not because of them. This is why the previous administration relied so little on Special Forces to combat terrorists.

As of now, I predict that Obama will probably have to concede to McChrystal and send another 40,000 troops to Afghanistan. If he doesn't, the right-wing media will endlessly portray him as "weak on defense," "anti-American," a foreign born secret Muslim, and "investing in defeat."

The Constitution says nothing about America being the policeman of the world. The president of the United States is the commander-in-chief and makes the final decision on military operations. Gen. Douglas MacArthur during the Korean War, wanted to use atomic weapons on the Chinese. President Truman said no, saving millions of lives and untold amounts of radioactive suffering. Our generals are not always right.

Let's hope our president has the guts to pull the plug on this immensely expensive, unwinnable quandary of a war in Afghanistan. Bring the troops home. Now.

COBA named one of best business schools by the Princeton Review

By Martine Howell

Guest writer

The College of Business Administration at Georgia Southern has been named by The Princeton Review as one the 301 best business schools in the country.

This year marks the fourth consecutive year that COBA has been included on the list.

"It is an honor to be included on The Princeton Review's best business schools list," said Ronald Shiffler, dean of COBA.

He attributed faculty dedication to student's learning and program flexibility as some of the reasons for the inclusion.

COBA's MBA program is highlighted and reviewed as a "steal" for the education quality at the offered price.

Current marketing instructor and GSU alumnus John Kohn said, "GSU's inclusion on the list reinforces that I made a good decision."

Inclusion in the list is first based on reviews conducted by staff of The Princeton Review.

After schools meet the qualifying criteria, Princeton contacts the selected colleges and asks for access to student opinions through a mail survey.

Based on the results of the student's surveys, the top schools are compiled into various lists for publication.

According to Melissa Holland, director of GSU's MBA program, students looking to return to school to further advance their education should consider seeking a MBA.

"An MBA is a good compliment to any degree because any field you go into has business-related aspects," she said.

Admissions into the MBA program are based on an index which is calculated by combining a student's undergraduate GPA with his Georgia Management Admissions Test score.

Senior privilege allows senior undergraduate students to be admitted into the graduate program with a minimum GPA of 3.25. Undergraduates admitted in the program must score acceptably on the GMAT and submit those scores before their third course at the business school.

Currently, GSU offers two MBA programs one provides on-campus learning, and the second is strictly Web-based. The program offers 10 courses for a total of 30 credit hours.

The on-campus program and the Web-based program cannot be combined at this time, but on-campus students have access to certain online lower division classes.

Evening classes are offered for students pursuing an on-campus MBA, which allows working students greater flexibility with their schedules.

GSU also has a satellite campus, the Coastal Georgia Center, which is located in downtown Savannah for additional convenience. GSU's on-campus program costs $260 per credit hour to attend.

The Web-based MBA program is part of larger consortium of six schools which make up the Georgia Web MBA.

After a two-day, on-campus orientation, students are offered classes strictly online. Professors are available to students through cell phone numbers and the Internet.

In order to further ensure contact with instructors, wireless Internet access cards are provided to university staff if they must leave town.

The Web-based course is also cheaper than the on-campus program, costing approximately $18,000.

"Since inclusion [in previous lists] the College of Business Administration has seen a dramatic increase in student enrollment," said Shiffler. "If not for Dr. Mike McDonald, who guided the MBA program for the last 10 years, we wouldn't have made the list."

As one of the longest-running MBA programs in the state, GSU's MBA program has been offered for over 30 years, and it is accredited by the Association to Advance Collegiate Schools of Business.

Anyone interested in learning more about the MBA program can speak to representatives from the College of Business Association by attending this year's Graduate Fair, will be held at the RAC Nov. 11 from 9 a.m.-1 p.m.

Those unable to attend can contact Melissa Holland, director of MBA programs at GSU by phone at (912) 478-2357 or by e-mail mholland@georgiasouthern.edu.

The events on Monday, Tuesday and Thursday will begin with a brief orientation and introduction to the Counseling Center and then will continue with a 30-minute movie clip that concentrates on the topic of the day's event. After these videos, the presenter will open the room to discussion.

On Monday, from 3:30-5p.m., the theme will be risk reduction for sexual assault.

Students will learn ways to reduce the risk of being a victim of sexual assault and how to avoid situations where such events could happen in the first place.

Tuesday's focus is on suicide and depression. Students will learn how to help friends, family and other loved ones deal with depression. This event will run from 1:30-3p.m.

On Thursday, a final presentation will be given from 3:30-5p.m. with the theme of the dangers of alcohol abuse. A free, risk-assessment opportunity will be available for those who attend.

Wellness Week Schedule

Tuesday, Oct. 19	RISK REDUCTION FOR SEXUAL ASSAULT	RU 2084	3:30 p.m.-5 p.m.
Wednesday, Oct. 20	BEING A MENTAL HEALTH ALLY	RU 2084	1:30 p.m.-3 p.m.
Thursday, Oct. 21	MYTHBUSTERS	RU 2047	3:30 p.m.-5 p.m.
Friday, Oct. 22	DEATH BY ALCOHOL - SAM SPADY STORY	RU 2084	3:30 p.m.-5 p.m.

All events are free and open to the public.

These three events will be held in Russell Union room 2084.

On Wednesday, students are invited to attend an interactive presentation on diversity issues and myths about various populations.

A wide range of stereotypes will be explored with the purpose of dispelling false ideas about different ethnic and lifestyle groups. This event will be held in Russell Union room 2047.

The purpose of these events is, according to staff psychologist Kim Rowan, "to help people understand on an emotional level the problems that these things can cause. Our goal is to be interactive and educational, but fun."

This is the first time that the Counseling Center has set up an outreach program as part of Wellness Week, though last semester, the Counseling Center did a similar program.

"We had about 50 people come to each event, which was really a turnout considering that we just advertised to classes as an extra credit option. We hope that, now that it's part of Wellness Week, we'll get a lot of students attending. We plan to do it again next year if all goes well," said Rowan.

The main theme of the entire outreach program is prevention and recognizing problems before they become serious, said Rowan.

"If you have a problem, we'd rather you come in before it is so severe that it becomes overwhelming. Prevention is the best method for staying mentally healthy," she said.

Rowan emphasized the program is not only for students who suspect they may have problems, "You don't have to have a major problem to benefit from looking at wellness problems."

All events are free, and anyone can attend.

What not to wear is coming to the Georgia Southern Campus

By Samantha Shore

Guest writer

What do you wear to a job interview? If this question puzzles you, like it does many-soon-to-be graduates, then you should consider going to What Not to Wear: Campus Edition.

This event will take place in the Rotunda on Oct. 26 from 12-1 p.m.

The Office of Career Services has received feedback from several employers about the inappropriate dress that prospective employees wear.

Upon hearing this, career services organized this event to show what is and is not appropriate to wear for an interview.

The television show, "What Not to Wear," was the inspiration, but career services also wanted to add something else to give more ideas about what is acceptable in the workplace.

The event will consist of a fashion show with models wearing both professional and unprofessional outfits. It will be an interactive experience because the audience will be prompted to tell if the outfit is appropriate or not.

There will be ample opportunity to begin learning about styles that are acceptable because there are about 20 models and about 20 outfits to learn from.

Several stores are involved in this process, including Maurice's, Target, JC Penney's and The Sir Shop. These stores have been generous enough to allow the models to wear some of their clothing.

The stores have either donated or loaned a mixture of business and business casual clothes.

The second attraction at the event will be the actual makeover of a Georgia Southern student. The student will be given a new outfit, a new hairstyle and a lesson in make-up. The Carmandy and Nick of this event will be representatives from Hair Plus and Mary Kay.

The student was chosen through a nomination. A campus-wide e-mail was sent out asking for nominations for anyone that could use a professional makeover.

Stephanie Saunders, a career advisor for Career Services, said of the selection process, "We wanted to use a student who we felt was ready for a change and really wanted help to make themselves more professional. We wanted to help give the student a new confidence as they begin to leave their college life and progress into the world of work."

The event will have certain similarities to the television show, but it will also have several differences.

The student that has been chosen to participate will be given the makeover separately from the fashion show. The audience will view before pictures and then the student will be presented for the after effect.

Saunders said, "This event is open to anyone on campus or in the community. We believe that this is a topic that anyone can learn more about."

Family Weekend instills Southern traditions among Eagles

The Office of Orientation and Parent Programs is hosting numerous activities for families

By Amber Laurin

Guest writer

Georgia Southern will be welcoming families onto campus Oct. 16-18 for the annual Fall Family Weekend.

The weekend will kick off with a dessert reception from 7-9 p.m. on Friday night. This year's reception features several new activities as well as a new location.

A magician will be on hand to entertain children and those who are young at heart. The reception will be held on the third floor of the Zach S. Henderson Library, and guests are required to have a Family Weekend ticket.

"Having it in the library this year, I think, is something we are really excited about because it is a new building, and a lot of parents may not have been inside of it yet," said Erin Campbell, assistant director of Admissions, Orientation and Parent Programs.

Families who have not purchased tickets for Fall Family Weekend do have other opportunities to attend events on campus.

Eagle Entertainment will be screening "Harry Potter and the Half-Blood Prince," in the Russell Union theater from 7-9 p.m.

The movie is free with a Family Weekend nametag and $2 for regular entry. All concessions will be $1.

The Eagle Rally will also be held Friday at 7:30 p.m. at the Russell Union bus stop. This event is free and open to the public.

The Parents Association will host a breakfast on Saturday from 9-10:30 a.m. The breakfast will cost $7 for non-members. Following breakfast, parents are invited to a pre-game tailgate from 3:30-5:30 p.m.

GSU's marching band, Southern Pride, and the cheerleaders will help get families in the mood to cheer on the Eagles against UT Chattanooga. The game is scheduled to begin at 6 p.m.

To end Fall Family Weekend, University Housing will be hosting a breakfast in the residence halls for parents and their students.

"Fall Family Weekend is a great opportunity for parents to come down and visit with their students," Campbell said. "They may or may not have seen their student since the start of classes, and if they haven't this is a great time for them to come down and visit their student after their student has been settled in."

Fall Family Weekend, although popular among freshmen and sophomore families, has become a tradition for some juniors and seniors whose parents and families have been coming year after year.

The Office of Orientation and Parent Programs reported that they had registered several out-of-state families that were traveling from as far as Pennsylvania and Texas.

David Wright, a justice studies Major said,

"It's been a great family event that I have attended since I was little, coming to see my cousins followed by my brother. Now, my parents, brother and family come to see me while I attend school here and cheer on the Georgia Southern football team."

If parents are unable to attend, the Office of Orientation and Parent programs is planning to host several more spring family weekends in conjunction with an Eagle basketball game and an Eagle baseball game, as well as a trip to Atlanta for a Braves baseball game.

They also plan to have the dates for 2010 Fall Family Weekend set in early spring.

Students or parents who have any questions regarding any scheduled events should call the Office of Orientation and Parent Programs at (912) 478-7627.

A detailed schedule of the weekend can be found at students.georgiasouthern.edu/parent/fallfamilyweekend.htm.

Scare on the Square Brings Halloween Fun to Statesboro

By Derek Joyce

Guest writer

Throughout the week of Halloween, a series of fun events will take place around the downtown Statesboro Courthouse Square and Emma Kelly Theater.

From Oct. 28-31, there will be an ongoing free movie series, a ballet and "Rocky Horror," and on Halloween Night, there will be contests, games, and the Thriller Parade on the square.

The Scare on the Square event began last year as a cooperative effort of the Downtown Development Authority and the Statesboro Convention and Visitor's Bureau to bring a "festival atmosphere built around the 'Thriller' dance," said Adam Brady, the membership and program coordinator of the CVB and Georgia Southern graduate.

It is organized in conjunction with 11th Hour. Scare on the Square is also a continuation of a tradition of Statesboro children trick-or-treating along Savannah Avenue because they do not have anywhere else to do it.

The Halloween Movie Series will take place at the Averitt Center of the Arts's Emma Kelly Theater beginning on the 28th.

The first feature will be the original 1963 version of "The Haunting," which is considered a true Halloween classic.

"We like to bring more classic films to the Emma Kelly Theater. We want our audience who like the classics to come back," said Tim Chapman, the director of the Averitt Center of the Arts.

On the 30th is a viewer's choice movie. Originally, any movie was up for nomination, and the now top three are subject to a vote.

You can vote for your choice through the link on

People from the Statesboro community gathered last year for the Scare on the Square festivities.

the "Downtown Statesboro's Scare on the Square" page on Facebook. The choices are "Shaun of the Dead," "Night of the Living Dead" and "A Nightmare on Elm Street."

Of course, the culmination of the Scare on the Square will occur on Halloween night. After East Main and Siebald streets are blocked off at 4 p.m., the first event will be the Hansel and Gretel Storybook Ballet.

The ballet is produced by the Helen Redding School of Dance. It will take place at the Emma Kelly Theater and last 45 minutes. At 6 p.m., there will be a costume contest at the Courthouse Square divided into kid, adult and pet categories.

At 7 p.m., the Scarecrow contest will begin. For that contest, every establishment in downtown Statesboro created their own unique scarecrow, which is currently displayed in or around the maker's building.

On Halloween, all of these scarecrows will be on display in the Courthouse Square and subject to a vote.

"There will be 30 scarecrows out there, if not more," said Kim Trawick of the Downtown Developmental Authority.

At 9 p.m., attendees can sit back and watch all sorts of ghouls and zombies dance down East Main Street in the second annual Thriller Parade. Those interested in joining the parade may do so by attending two of the three rehearsals on the 15, 22 and 29 at the Sea Island Bank parking lot.

The dance is taught by Sherri Thompson of the Southern Dance Academy. Contact Adam Brady at adambrady@frontier.com for more information.

In between these events, companies from all around downtown will host booths, games, music and even dancing around the square. According to Trawick, activities include "fishing for treats, painting pumpkins and bowling for pumpkins."

"It is designed to something that everyone can enjoy," said Brady. However, the emphasis until the Thriller Dance will be for the children. Participating establishments include First Friday, West Main Art Gallery, Sweetwater Nursery and Georgia Southern.

"You cannot have Halloween without showing the movie 'Halloween,'" said Chapman. The projection of the 1978 original version of "Halloween," the first of the Michael Myers movies, will mark the end of the Scare on the Square event on Halloween night.

On the 29th, the Rocky Horror Picture Show will be performed at the Emma Kelly Theater. Tickets are $5, and the show opens at 9 p.m. Bob Peterson is a co-director of the production and has been in Rocky Horror for seven years, playing the part of Riff-Raff, the male servant.

Peterson said that the availability of lighting, stage management and "a series of happy accidents made [last year's] Rocky Horror the best ever," he said.

In front of the film will be community actors who make it their duty to make the event as interactive, funny, outrageous and sexually tantalizing as possible. "It got a following because it was so weird," said Peterson.

Other events around Statesboro during the week of Halloween include the "Resurrection" Haunted Forest, which is open from Oct. 26-31. It is located on Akins Boulevard and Forest Drive on the GSU campus. The entry fee is $5 and is open from 8 p.m.-12 a.m.

There is a more child-friendly version on Oct. 26, 27 and 31 from 7 p.m.-8 p.m. The GSU simultaneous productions of the "Rocky Horror Picture Show" will be featured on the 30th at 10 p.m. in the Russell Union ballroom and theater.

Nintendo's Wii continues dominance with price cuts

By Martin Rand III

Guest writer

Nintendo has cut the price of the Wii by $50, dropping the price from $249 to $199.

This came two weeks after a Nintendo spokesperson denied reports of a price cut to the Wii, saying, "We currently have no plans to cut the price of the Wii. Current talks of price cut are rumor and speculation."

The new price went into effect Sept. 27.

With respect to the two other major video game giants Sony's Playstation 3 and Microsoft's Xbox 360, Nintendo's Wii has outsold both since being released in November 2006 and with the new price cut, it should garner even more attention.

"I don't even like Nintendo, but the Wii is so cheap now I might get one," said sophomore Jawone Mitchell.

As of Oct. 3, Nintendo has sold just under 54-million units of their Wii console. That's 21 million more than the 360 and 29 million more than the Playstation 3.

The new price of $199 has improved the sales of the Wii. In the week that followed the price reduction, Wii sold an estimated 176 thousand more units than the previous week.

Graduate student of sequential art and graphic design Ryan Sellars thinks it's more due to the Nintendo dominance than a price cut.

"The Wii doesn't have the capabilities of the other two systems like playing DVDs, playing CDs and Blu-ray technology. It does have a great marketing team on its side that knows how to get the product out across a range of demographics."

The Wii also contains the highest selling exclusive game of the three systems. Nintendo's "Wii Sports" has sold over 48 million copies worldwide. Bungie's "Halo 3" has sold over 10 million copies for the Xbox 360 and Konami's "Metal Gear Solid 4: Guns of the Patriots" has sold slightly over 4 million copies for the Playstation 3 worldwide.

The Wii has the lead in every major category in the industry and is on pace to becoming the highest selling system in the history of video games.

However, one month before Nintendo dropped the price of the Wii, Sony and Microsoft cut the price of their systems.

The Playstation 3 and Xbox 360 Elite got price cuts of $100 each, bringing their sale price to $299.

Playstation 3's price cut took effect on August 30. The following week, Sony saw an increase in unit sales to over 551 thousand. This number is significantly higher than the 128 thousand units sold the week before their price cut.

For the next month, the Playstation 3 ruled the charts, outselling both the Wii and the Xbox 360. Sony took the components out of the Playstation 3, that made it so expensive and unique, like the Blu-ray player and Wi-Fi Connectivity, and turned the console into what Sellars called a "pure gaming system."

"Of course they were going to drop the price," said Mitchell. "Nobody was going to buy that thing for $400."

Sony's resurgence in sales was enough for Nintendo to stop denying the rumors and finally drop the price of the Wii.

Special photo

Nintendo's Wii console continues to outsell competitors such as Sony's Playstation 3 and Xbox 360

The move proved well as it put the Wii back on top of the charts

The Xbox 360 saw very little change in sales with their price cut. Microsoft is counting on next year when Project Natal launches.

Project Natal is a system that will allow players to use their Xbox 360 without a controller relying on motion-sensors. It's Microsoft's answer to the Wii's motion-sensor control ability.

Microsoft has stated it hopes that Natal will extend the life of Xbox 360 beyond the traditional five to seven year expectancy.

However, for the past three years - and with the new price cut, probably next year as well - we could see the Wii continue to dominate the video game industry.

GAMEDAY MAYDAY

GEORGIA SOUTHERN EAGLES (3-3, 2-1) VS. CHATTANOOGA MOCS (4-1, 2-1)

Rob Eakins/STAFF

Dion DuBose (33), Cole Fountain (70), Lee Chapple (14) and Hartland Bower (47) enter the UNC-Chapel Hill game to toss the coin.

The Georgia Southern Eagles will face one of their toughest opponents of the season when they host the Chattanooga Mocs on Saturday.

Although GSU holds the series record at 19-3, this is a huge conference game as the Mocs have been impressive this season.

The Mocs are very careful with the football as quarterback B.J. Coleman has only thrown one interception the entire season. The UTC crushing game has been slow to say the least, so expect the Mocs offense to test the GSU secondary a majority of the game.

The Mocs rushing game isn't terrible however, so it will be important to not overlook the ground game either.

The UTC defense has forced seven interceptions over the first five games, so as usual, this game might come down to whether or not the GSU offense can limit their turnovers.

UTC is considered a 'dark horse' in the SoCon this season. This is a good Moc team that should not be taken lightly.

A win could propel GSU in the SoCon standings. It is safe to say this is one of the better games at Paulson with talented and determined teams fighting for their season.

Inside the Huddle: Chattanooga Mocs

Offense

Moc quarterback B.J. Coleman will ultimately determine the fate of UTC's success on offense.

He has done a great job all year of limiting turnovers and putting points on the board.

The Mocs have a two-back system, rotating both Bryan Fitzgerald and Chris Awuah. Each tailback has brought their own success to the UTC offense. Fitzgerald is averaging around five yards per carry while Awuah leads the team in rushing touchdowns.

Awuah is also a threat in the receiving game, with 98 yards and a touchdown.

Coleman is very good at spreading the ball out, hitting six different receivers with at least one touchdown.

Defense

The UTC defense has been the key to success for the Mocs this season. In the Mocs only loss of the season, they gave up 38 points to Furman.

In all four of UTC's wins, they have not given up more than 13 points. It is safe to say that the Mocs' defense seems more in tact than in past years.

Joseph Thornton is the key player to watch on the UTC defense. He currently leads the team in tackles with 46.

Josh Beard is the other household name on the Mocs' defense. He currently leads the UTC defense with 5.5 sacks and has the ability to cause turnovers for opposing offense. Protection on him should be a key of victory for GSU.

Mid-Season Awards

Offense

MVP: Adam Urbano

Urbano has brought a rushing attack to the bubble screen happy offense that GSU has. His productivity has made opposing defenses stay on their heels as the Eagles now have a more balanced attack on offense. He continues to make big plays and would probably have more if he didn't split carries with Robinson or Nolley, respectively.

Breakout: Jamere Valentine

There were many questions as to who would take over at the receiver position. The freshman Jamere Valentine has been around every big play through air the season. To be fair, every receiver has played well a majority of the season. Valentine has been the most consistent and promising out of the group.

Defense

MVP: Darrell Pasco

It seems as if everytime there is a turnover made by the GSU defense, Pasco is in the mix. He currently has two interceptions and two fumble recoveries. Pasco has seven deflected passes and five broken up plays. He has become the leader by example and plays hard, smart football. Maybe loosing Carson wasn't so bad.

Breakout: Brent Russell

Russell has made an immediate impact on the GSU defense since he was named a starter. He is currently third on the GSU defense in tackles and ties for most sacks with three. Russell has also forced a fumble and blocked two kicks this season. Everytime there is a big play involving the front seven, Russell is there more times than none.
